Speech of W. P. Fessenden, of Maine, Against the Repeal of the Missouri Prohibition, North of 36° 30' Oct 14 2021 Excerpt from Speech of W. P. Fessenden, of Maine, Against the Repeal of the Missouri Prohibition, North of 36 30': Delivered in the Senate of the United States, March 3, 1854, on the Bill to Establish Territorial Governments in Nebraska and Kansas Mr. Fessenden. Is there such a thing as sovereignty recognised by the people? Mr. Cass. I will state to the Senator that it gives you no kind Of power. You are sovereign in relation to other nations. When you want to know what you may do, you may consult the laws of nations to ascertain; but as to who is to do it, and how it is to be done, you must look to the Constitution; and if you do not find it there, it is with the people. The Tax Upon Paper Jun 29 2020 Excerpt from The Tax Upon Paper: The Case Stated for Its Immediate Repeal The producers of an article are not always desirous to have it exempted from taxation. Those whose brawny shoulders are fitted to bear a heavy burden, are often unwilling to have it lessened lest rivals should grow up who may attain to their position. The Calico Printers petitioned for the continuance of the duty on printed calico. Advertisers were found who supported the advertisement duty, and Paper Makers of eminence exist who are weak enough to fear the competition of their poorer rivals. On the other hand, a party avowedly interested in the repeal of a tax, must always be heard with caution, though judged with candour. The Press assumes to decide on all questions which come before it. On the question of the Repeal of the Paper Duty, the position of an advocate more befits it than that of a judge; but if we assume on this occasion no higher ground - if we call upon the public to scrutinise at once our facts and our arguments as those of interested parties, we do so with the full conviction not only that the interests of our readers, as such, are the same as our own, but that the Repeal of the Paper Duty is imperatively demanded by the material interests of the community - that this duty is not only a tax on knowledge, but a tax on industry; and that its effects are at least as prejudicial to every other interest as they are to our own. It is only because it was imposed for the purpose of putting on the press a restraint beyond the law that it has been associated exclusively with the press in the minds of men, and had it not been accompanied by the newspaper stamp and the advertisement duty, it would long since have been numbered with its kindred abominations, the excise on glass, leather, candles, and bricks. Before pointing out the particular modes in which the tax Operates injuriously, we propose to give a short narrative of its existence from its first imposition to the present time. A Letter to a Member of Parliament, Concerning the Repeal of the Corporation and Test Acts (Classic Reprint) Aug 12 2021 Excerpt from A Letter to a Member of Parliament, Concerning the Repeal of the Corporation and Test Acts As to Liberty in general, no People, I believe, ever willingly gave up more than was necessary to the End of Government, or at least, more than they were persuaded was necessary; more than this ought not to be taken from them. As a Liberty greater than this, tends to Licentiousness; for a greater Restraint is a Degree of Slavery: If this Restraint respects a part only of the Body of the People, it will by them be more sensibly felt. American Women and the Repeal of Prohibition Dec 28 2022 Rose (history, California State U.) analyzes the political mechanisms used to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcohol. What makes the work unique is his emphasis on the role of women's organizations in both prohibition and repeal, and how the arguments used by women's organizations to promote the Eighteenth Amendment in 1923 were used by opponents to repeal it in 1933--specifically, the idea of "home protection," which was a socialist feminist ideology held by both groups. The author is dedicated to recovering the history of politically conservative women who have been traditionally ignored or dismissed in other historical studies. Repeal the 8th Nov 15 2021 Abortion is illegal in almost every circumstance in Ireland, making it the only democracy in the western world to have such a constitutional ban. Between 1980 and 2015, at least 165,438 Irish women and girls accessed UK abortion services. In 2016, the figure was 3,265. Any woman or girl who procures an abortion, or anyone who assists a woman to procure an abortion in Ireland can be criminalised and imprisoned for up to fourteen years. A woman may not procure an abortion in Ireland if she is pregnant due to incest or rape, or to prevent inevitable miscarriage and fatal foetal abnormality. The movement to repeal the Eighth Amendment and make abortion legal in Ireland has grown massively over the last few years. This anthology shares the literature, personal stories, opinions, photography, art and design produced by the movement that catalysed 2018's momentous referendum. Featuring prize-winning novelists, critically acclaimed poets, cutting-edge artists and journalists on the front line, this anthology will be the definitive collection of the art inspired by the most pressing debate in contemporary Ireland, and beyond. Contributors include: Lisa McInerney, Anne Enright, Louise O'Neill, Caitlin Moran, Tara Flynn, Aisling Bea, Sinead Gleeson, Emmet Kirwan.
